LA DOLCE CAMPER-VITA

As seasoned fans of the camper van lifestyle, we both – each with our family, with friends, with like-minded souls – have traversed so many beautiful countries in Europe. We discovered how different camper van vacations can be depending on the destination, but we also know that what we love so much about these travels is always a given: the priceless feeling of being free, ready for any adventure that comes along. Being able to cook your own food, spontaneously, depending on what you feel like at that moment, and especially based on what delicious local ingredients have come your way that day; for us, that's pure joy, the stuff perfect vacations are made of.

Our love of camper van travelling and our passion for good food and top products recently took us to Italy. Of course! Is there a more delicious travel destination for foodies than Italy? In the mountains you eat the best pecorino cheese, for the best ragu you have to go to Emilia-Romagna, the most delicious stuffed omelette we tasted in Umbria. Not to mention vongole and delicious wines...

This book is an account of our summer road trips through Italy: Bram travelled along the coastal regions with his girlfriend and daughters and fell in love with the Ligurian coast (think Portofino and Cinque Terre) and the Amalfi coast below Naples. Not obvious regions for camper van enthusiasts, as there aren't many camper van-proof roads through the beautiful landscape with small villages and rugged rocky coasts. But Bram nevertheless found fine campsites there that proved the perfect base for day trips, such as a campsite on Lake Bracciano near Rome and a beautiful terraced campsite in Sorrento.

Els travelled across Italy with her surfer husband and dog Willy, from north to south, following their noses to Piemonte and Valle d'Aosta, Lombardy and the Dolomites, Le Marche and Tuscany, Abruzzo and Puglia. This book is an account of their wonderful trips, laced with lots of food, beautiful borghi and cathedrals that will make you speechless. But above all it's a heartfelt ode to a land that stands for passion, love, purity and simplicity.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL PLACES AND DELICIOUS RECIPES FOR A CAMPER VAN TRIP THROUGH ITALY

PANISSA PIEMONTESE

A risotto with white beans and barolo wine: sounds good, doesn't it? Even better: this dish calls for just the right amount of wine to make sure you can still have a glass while cooking. We're adding some fennel sausages as well, just because they're so delicious.

Serves 4-6
 4 onions
 3 cloves of garlic
 2 stalks of celery
 2 stalks of fennel
 1 fennel bulb
 4 fennel leaves
 400g of pancetta or pancetta
 100g of butter
 400g of ground beef
 400g of ground pork
 100g of ground turkey
 200g of ground chicken
 200g of ground lamb
 200g of ground venison
 2 stalks of parsley

If you're using dried beans, first cook the beans in boiling water with 1 bay leaf and 1 shallot.

Chop the remaining three shallots and garlic. Rinse and cut the celery into small pieces. Heat the olive oil in a large pan and sauté the onion and celery. Meanwhile, cut the pancetta into fine strips and add to the onion along with the garlic and the remaining 3 bay leaves. Stew everything for 5 minutes.

Cut the sausages into pieces and fry on both sides with the rest in the pan. Now add the rice to the pan and stir well for a few minutes. Pour in the wine and let the rice absorb it.

When the wine is almost completely absorbed, pour in the stock, stirring little by little, until all the stock has been absorbed. (Each time you pour a dash of stock into the rice, you let the rice absorb the stock almost completely. When the rice is almost 'dry', add another dash of stock).

When the risotto is almost ready, add the beans. Continue stirring and absorbing for a while. Remove the pan from the heat and spoon in the butter. Stir everything well and serve with parsley according to your taste.

For food stylist Els Sirejacob and food photographer Bram Debaenst, travelling by camper van is a way of life. It's a passion they share with many others, which explains why their book Camper Food & Stories was an immediate success. Their ode to free life on the road and to pure and tasty food got great reviews and called for a sequel. So Els and Bram decided to each travel to Italy with their camper van to tour the most beautiful regions: from the Amalfi Coast to Piedmont, from the Dolomites to Lake Garda, from Parma via the hills of Bologna to the border of Le Marche...

In this new book, they share the wonderful spots they discovered and the great food they tasted in the land of la dolce vita. Be inspired by their beautiful, dreamy travel photos, personal anecdotes and best camper van tips on the spot, and of course by the recipes tailored to each destination, starring local fresh produce. Imagine the most delicious pasta dishes ever, mouth-watering ragout, tempting salads with the best tomatoes and fresh Parmesan cheese, ... This is a truly delicious book for anyone who's making plans to visit Italy, as well as for armchair travellers with an appetite for Italian cuisine at its best.

ALONG
MODERNIST
HOUSES

In 2019, Gerlin Heestermans started the online platform Toerist Modernist as an ode to Belgium's often little-known modernist heritage gems. Soon her hobby – spotting houses and buildings, finding the courage to ring the doorbell and ask for a visit – became almost an obsession. She mapped out several architecture walks (and also organises tailor-made tours) to put the many amazingly handsome modernist houses and buildings on the map. Her Instagram account @toeristmodernist (with more than 24.5K followers) became a must-follow for architecture lovers.

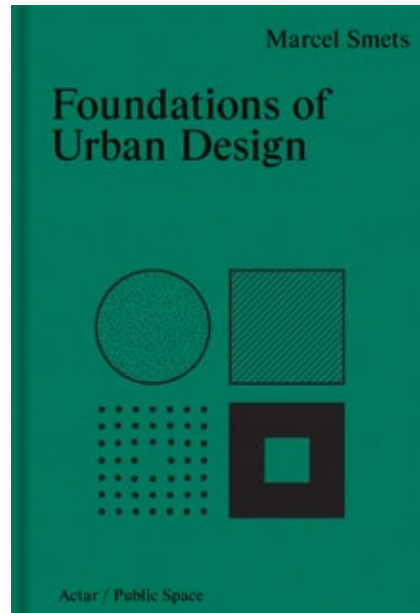

In this guide, Gerlin shares her 12 best walks in places like Charleroi, Deurne, Turnhout, Tournai, Liège, Ostend or Mariakerke. Each walk is described in detail and illustrated with photos of the exterior façades and a clear map, followed by a selection of inspiring interior images of some of the houses on the route.

After years of experience in education, research, design and policy, Professor Marcel Smets, former Flemish Government Architect, compiles his insights on the city and urban design in a personal booklet. In his search for the foundations of urban design, Marcel Smets puts forward thirty complementary pairs of concepts. He starts from archetypal settlement forms (ribbon and cluster, ladder and star), typifies morphological categories (street and road, island and archipelago) and highlights changing design processes (creator and curator, growth and improvement). The concept pairs are illustrated with drawings by Heinrich Altenmüller.

This English edition is the fully revised and expanded edition of the previously published book in Dutch and French.

Hidden beneath the streets of Margate in Kent, the Shell Grotto is a bewitching, dream-like space to inhabit. Passing through an unassuming entrance in a quiet residential part of the seaside town, you head down below street level before being met with a warren of underground passages, all lined with softly gleaming seashells. The shells – 4.5 million of them, mainly British and found locally – are set into the chalk in beautifully patterned mosaics. Why? Who knows. The grotto was discovered by chance in 1835 and its origins remain unknown to this day, though theories range from an ancient pagan temple to an extravagant, Regency folly. See what you think when you step inside.

You'll want to wrap up warm for a trip down Beer's Quarry Caves, even if it's beach weather above ground. The cool, man-made labyrinth of underground tunnels is the result of over 2,000 years of quarrying Beer Stone. The Romans were the first to start using the creamy limestone, but it's since been used in famous buildings like Westminster Abbey and The Tower of London. You can now take a tour of the vast underground caverns near the pretty village of Beer.

butleypriory.co.uk

Every corner of this 13th century priory is dreamy. The huge Grade I listed building, which sleeps 13, is all of sweeping stone arches, huge fireplaces, medieval window seats and floppy fabrics in calming shades. The Priory is the former gatehouse to an Augustinian monastery, which was founded in 1171, and centuries ago welcomed royalty, even acting as a royal hunting lodge for a time. These days, the romantic building, surrounded by Suffolk woodland, is an otherworldly place you can call home for a few days.

Sat at a high point with amazing views overlooking the landscape at Hackfall (page 28) and beyond, the Ruin is one of the forest follies landowner William Aislabie created in the 18th century. While many of the woodland's other buildings have fallen into disrepair, the Ruin has a different story. It was saved by the Landmark Trust and turned into a holiday home that truly is one of a kind. The building has two identities - from the front it is gothic in style while the side hidden from public view is rough and rugged, designed to evoke ancient Roman ruins. Uniquely, to access each of the Ruin's three rooms you must use the outside terrace. A nighttime trip to the bathroom has never felt more dramatic.
