Distinctly Walala in Mauritius

Salt Boutique Hotel

More is definitely more. While most modern-day design lovers shy away from using saturated swaths of color at home, opting instead for the Scandinavian neutrals that have become so of-the-moment, there's something to be said for making a bold statement, whether your tastes skew toward the minimalist or you consider yourself more of a traditionalist. When splashed on walls, accented through accessories, or used to cover furnishings, vibrant hues have a way of infusing a space with cheerful energy, invigorating the senses, and prompting creativity with just one look. To prove our point, we took to the AD archives and came up with a collection of inspiring living rooms, bedrooms, libraries, and more that will have you seeing red, blue, green—every color of the rainbow. Interior designer Todd Black conceived the bone-inlay desk and chair in the living area of the Key West, Florida, home shared by model, actress, and writer Veronica and her husband, produced in saturated swaths of color tastes Morocco.

The São Paulo living room of architect and interior designer Sig Bergamin and his partner, architect Murilo Lomas, is a cocktail of colors and cultures. Fringed sofas clad in a Rubelli velvet are laden with vibrant pillows, and shelves showcase Murano-glass vessels; a Vik Muniz painting is displayed against the mirrored fireplace wall.

SAMPLE COVER

Bright homes with a splash: discover colorful interiors that will make you smile and feel alive.

Home has become even more central than it ever was. It is now a space for life, for work, and also for play. When we spend so much time inside, in one place, interiors have to be exciting, stimulating, cheerful. House of Joy is exactly that: it presents the freshest trends in playful interior design. Colors jump from furniture to kaleidoscopic walls. Lines become squiggly and bold. The palette is warm and full, and not shy of extravagance.

Step into an iridescent micro-flat in Tokyo, onto a speckled terrace in London, or into a vivacious wine bar in Moscow. Get inspired by the designers who've had enough of the drab and sombre. House of Joy is the perfect antidote for those who are starved of color and patterns, and who want their rooms to ooze with life.
