● LH: As a public speaker and someone who often appears at festivals and conferences how do you use these experiences to expand your network?

GB: It's nice to talk about the work that you make and meet people, and there's been a real push at conferences to have more women speakers and so I definitely met a lot of women who I've stayed in touch with. And I also think it's good for other women to see women in that situation and be visible. I know for me, when I came into this business it was really important to me to see Jennifer [check surname] in the job she was in because it somehow made my aspirations seem real to me, it felt attainable.
